Marc is currently Director of the SNC-Lavalin Academy.

Abstract:

As project controls professionals, you are often presenting strategies, schedules, estimates, progress reports and other material to clients, project management and corporate management. A presentation is an opportunity for much more than just conveying information. It is an opportunity to connect your goals with those of your audience, so as to enlist their support and move forward together. One can infuse a presentation with stories and reasons to be passionate to connect with people on an emotional level. And when people identify with a meaningful vision, they can find their own motivations for becoming advocates of the change you seek. Then providing a manageable path forward can foster the confidence people need to embark on a journey with you.

Themes: Key points will include the following:

- The role of the presenter
- Developing a Sound Plan
- Vision with passion
- Cultivating support
- Building momentum
- Driving Change
- Motivating your audience
- Leadership
- Storytelling

Come out and join your colleagues, exchange ideas and expand your network.
